THE PROBLEM

SEO work is still fragmented.

Teams lose time moving between audits, keyword tools, competitor research, content workflows, analytics, and reports.

Too many tools

Multiple subscriptions, tabs, exports, and duplicated setup across client accounts.

Too much manual handoff

Research lives in one place, audits in another, reporting somewhere else.

Harder to scale agency work

Every extra client multiplies reporting, monitoring, and context switching.

The opportunity

Bring the core SEO workflow into one focused operating layer - without forcing teams to stitch together a dozen disconnected products.

Consolidation

SEO audits, keywords, rank tracking, competitor research, AI visibility, content, and reporting in one platform.

First-party measurement

Google Search Console and Analytics connections help separate real observed performance from modeled estimates.

Execution roadmap

The next layer is controlled site execution with approvals, verification, rollback, and outcome measurement.

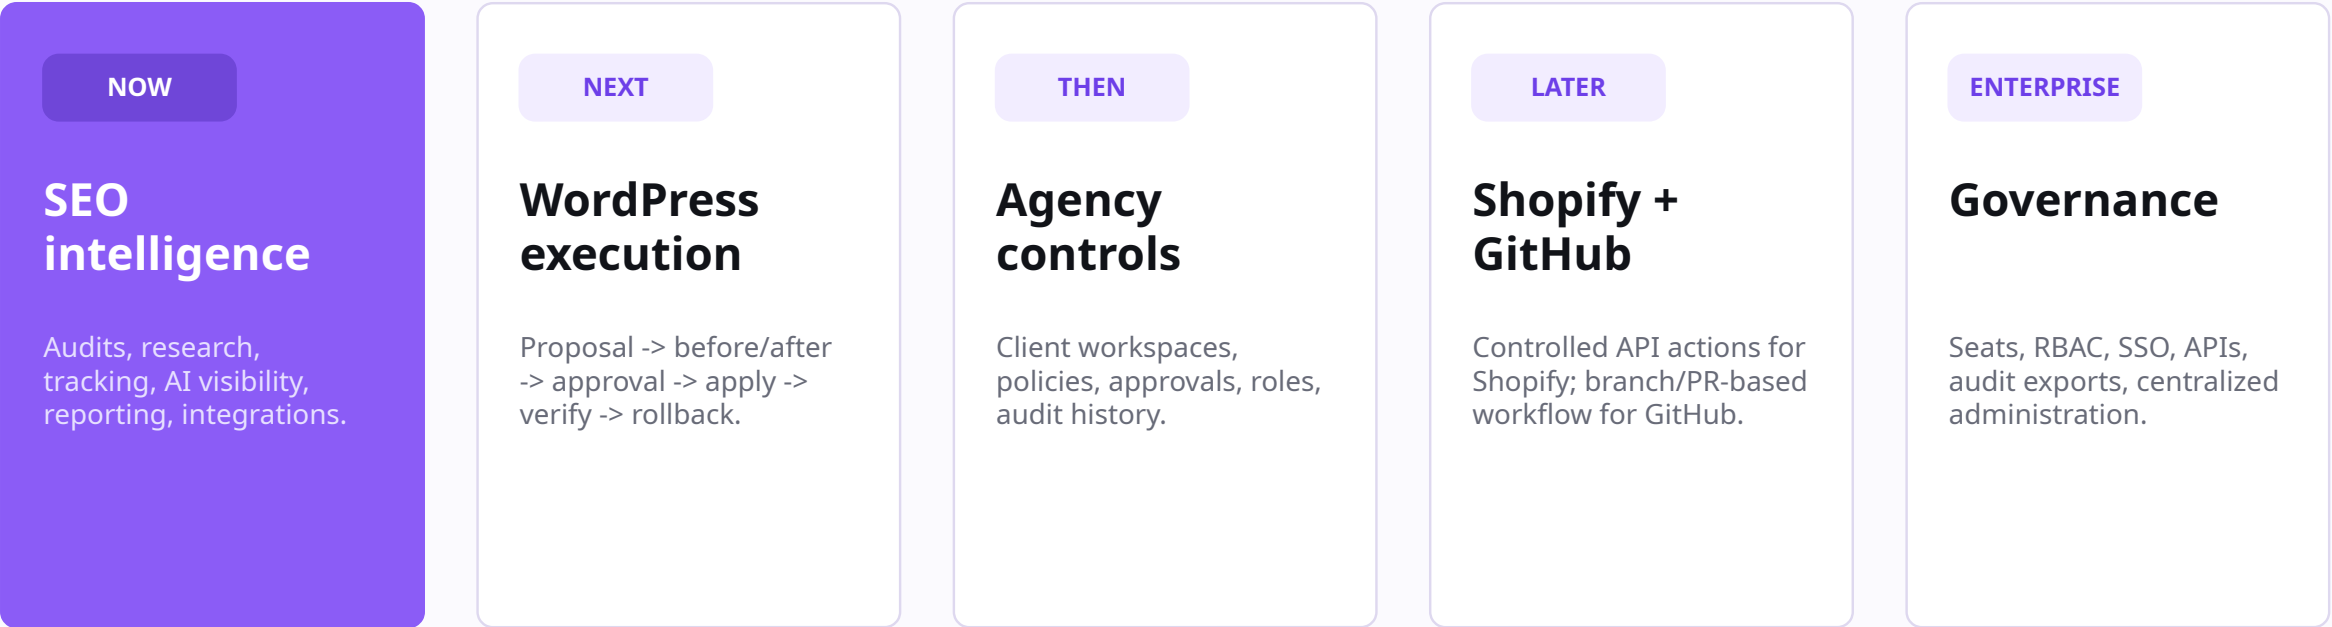

Capital-efficient distribution.

Sell where the buyer already is: agencies, consultants, marketing teams, and the communities that serve them.

- 1 Product-led Free plan, resources, comparison pages, use-case pages.
- 2 Direct agency sales Founder-led outreach and agency demos.
- 3 Commission channels Independent sales consultants and rep networks paid on verified sales.
- 4 Partnerships Agency, affiliate, technology, and ecosystem relationships.
- 5 Events Web Summit and targeted industry networking for customers, partners, and investors.

The roadmap moves from insight to execution.

Ship the execution layer progressively, starting with one safe vertical slice rather than broad autonomous access.

Roadmap items are product direction, not a promise of current availability.
